1. SUMMARY OF INCIDENT

On the 24th of November, 1999, SeVA #2008 was formally declared deceased following an incident that occurred during the preceding month. The declaration was issued after an extended period of uncertainty regarding the subject’s condition, whereabouts, and the circumstances surrounding his disappearance.

The incident, which has since become a subject of considerable institutional scrutiny, was initially classified as an unresolved disappearance. However, the subsequent recovery and examination of privately recorded camcorder footage provided sufficient evidence for the Seranian authorities to conclude that the subject had encountered an instance of Disorder 3492, colloquially referred to as “Shifters.”

The available footage indicates that SeVA #2008 was pursued and subsequently attacked by an entity identified as a Shifter. Although the recording establishes that a physical confrontation occurred, the precise circumstances of the subject’s presumed death remain unconfirmed.

No further footage depicting the subject following the encounter has been recovered.

The original recording was retained as evidence by the relevant authorities before being privately disclosed to the subject’s immediate family. Its eventual declassification and subsequent transfer to the Seranian National Archive permitted the incident to be formally documented for public reference.

Despite the release of the recording's existence into the public domain, several elements of the incident remain unresolved.

The National Archive acknowledges that the available documentation does not establish the complete sequence of events preceding the encounter, nor does it conclusively determine the ultimate fate of the entity responsible.

The subject's death declaration remains in effect.

2. RECOVERED EVIDENCE

The principal source of evidence associated with this incident consists of camcorder footage recovered from the personal recording equipment belonging to SeVA #2008.

Preliminary examination established that the recording contained visual evidence consistent with a direct encounter involving Disorder 3492.

The footage depicts the subject in the presence of an unidentified entity displaying characteristics subsequently associated with Shifter manifestations. The entity's behaviour, movements, and apparent interaction with the surrounding environment were deemed sufficiently consistent with previously documented cases to warrant its classification under Disorder 3492.

The recording concludes during or immediately following the apparent attack.

Due to the condition of the recovered material, the absence of corroborating witnesses, and the lack of subsequent recordings, investigators were unable to reconstruct the entirety of the encounter.

It is therefore impossible to establish with absolute certainty whether the subject expired immediately following the attack or survived for an indeterminate period thereafter.

The Archive further notes that the absence of a confirmed recovery of the subject does not, in itself, constitute evidence that the subject's remains were destroyed, relocated, or otherwise rendered inaccessible.

These possibilities remain unverified.

For reasons pertaining to the privacy of the deceased and the integrity of the original investigation, the complete recording has not been reproduced in this document.

Researchers seeking additional information regarding the behaviour, identification, and known manifestations of Disorder 3492 are directed to Article 97.3 of the Index of the Great and Dangerous Disorders of the World.

The Archive makes no further comment regarding the contents of said article.

3. IDENTIFICATION AND CLASSIFICATION

The entity observed in the recording was retrospectively identified as an instance of Disorder 3492.

The designation “Shifters” was adopted during the subsequent review of the incident and has since been used in official documentation concerning the disorder.

The precise mechanisms underlying the entity’s behaviour remain outside the scope of this report.

Nevertheless, the circumstances surrounding the encounter have contributed to a broader reassessment of the risks associated with human proximity to manifestations of Disorder 3492.

Prior to the incident, OPARS had maintained operational activities associated with the subject’s assignment. The extent to which these activities contributed to the circumstances of the encounter has not been conclusively established in the available public documentation.

The National Archive has not identified sufficient evidence to attribute direct responsibility for the subject’s death to any individual or organisation other than the entity observed in the recovered recording.

This determination should not be interpreted as a declaration that all relevant circumstances have been satisfactorily explained.

The investigation’s remaining uncertainties are acknowledged.

They are not, however, grounds for revising the current classification.

4. IMPACT ON OPARS

The financial and operational consequences of the incident have been substantial.

Following the declaration of SeVA #2008's death, OPARS experienced significant financial disruption associated with the loss of the subject, the circumstances of the incident, and the subsequent interruption of its activities.

The precise financial losses incurred have not been disclosed in the publicly available records.

However, contemporary documentation indicates that the incident placed sufficient strain upon the company's available resources to necessitate a temporary suspension of operations.

OPARS subsequently announced that it would cease its activities for an indefinite period while undertaking financial recovery and internal review.

No definitive date for the resumption of normal operations was provided in the announcement.

The suspension was described as temporary.

As of the publication of this report, the Archive has been unable to establish whether the company has fully recovered from the consequences of the incident or whether the interruption resulted in permanent changes to its organisational structure.

The National Archive has received no documentation sufficient to resolve this matter.

The long-term implications of the suspension therefore remain undetermined.

5. DECLASSIFICATION AND PUBLIC ACCESS

The recording associated with SeVA #2008 was initially retained for restricted review and was not made available to the general public.

Access was subsequently granted to the deceased's immediate family, in accordance with the procedures applicable at the time.

The material was later declassified and transferred into the custody of the Seranian National Archive, where it was incorporated into the documentary record concerning Disorder 3492.

The decision to declassify the material was not accompanied by the release of all associated investigative records.

Certain documents pertaining to the incident remain unavailable for public examination. The reasons for their continued restriction are not specified in the surviving declassification notice.

The Archive advises researchers that the public availability of this report should not be construed as confirmation that all relevant evidence has been disclosed.

This document constitutes a summary of the currently accessible record.

It is not a complete account of the investigation.

6. CONCLUDING STATEMENT

The death of SeVA #2008 represents a documented fatal encounter involving Disorder 3492 and serves as a reference point in the continuing examination of the risks associated with the disorder.

Although the recovered footage provides evidence of the encounter, it does not resolve every question concerning the subject’s final hours, the entity’s subsequent whereabouts, or the full circumstances surrounding the incident.

The resulting disruption to OPARS further demonstrates the potential for a single encounter to produce consequences extending beyond the immediate loss of life.

The Archive recognises the significance of the incident to the subject’s family and to those affected by the subsequent suspension of OPARS operations.

The subject’s death has been formally recorded.

The associated disorder remains classified.

The outstanding questions remain unanswered.

No further findings are available for publication at this time.
